

MESSAGE FROM ASPC PRESIDENT DALE HENWOOD

Leadership matters in every situation, in every industry and across all disciplines. The recent Board and Committee meetings and General Assembly in Macolin reminded me of the tremendous work that is being undertaken by the leaders serving on the ASPC Board. The current Board consists of nine Training Centre/Institute leaders who continue to use their resources, volunteer their time and significant expertise as they persistently look at programs and services that will add value and assist the ASPC members regardless of the level of development.

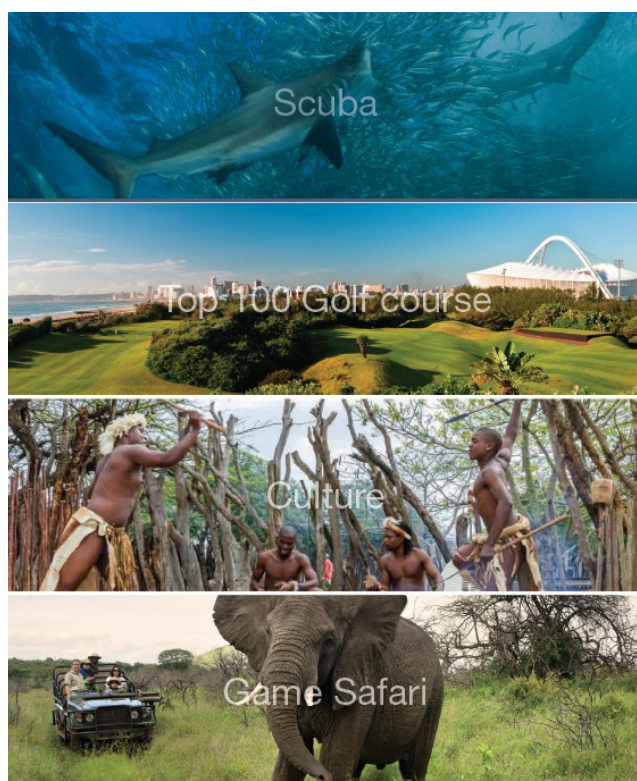

Sport has always been a place for creative, innovative and driven individuals. The ASPC offers a great opportunity to network, a forum to share best practices and interact with other thought leaders from high performance sport.

Although there may be regional idiosyncrasies and differences, most of us are faced with the same challenges, opportunities, pressures and frustrations. Through the ASPC we can share experiences best practices from around the world.

I am also reminded of something that high performers always do: they get out of the busy-ness and work on themselves. The upcoming European Forum in Sierra Nevada, Spain and the 2017 ASPC Forum in Durban, South Africa are excellent opportunities to invest in your development, I encourage you to attend one of these events to find out things you do not know. With enough humility, we can learn from anyone.

Best wishes as you prepare for Rio!

ASPC AT THE IOC

The ASPC Board met with the Department of Sports and the IOC Olympic Solidarity in April 2016 to continue collaborative discussions initiated last year.

The framework of collaboration extends to collaboration in the ASPC Forums and other areas of the Centres related to training coaches, online course or initiatives on dual career.

Board members also presented the ASPC award plate to the Deputy Director General of the IOC, Pere Miro.
